News from Jordbrugrotta

The article describes a winter-trip, surveying an infrequently visited part of Jordbrugrotta. The area is reached either through a narrow passage or from the bottom of a cliff. Therefore the thinner one of the party had to negotiate the narrow passage before he could throw a rope down the pitch to the bigger one. From the main passage the active streamway was followed upstream until a solid, rock, restriction stopped the enterprise. 119 new metres was the result for the day, which makes the cave 4442 metres in total. There is probably not much more to be found, but some locations have still to be checked.
