

Norsk Grotteblad nr 69, Desember 2017

Redningsøvelse i Nysetergruva

Rescue training in the Nysetergruva

Every training by NRGT is exciting and mother nature always shows who the boss is. This time a zink mine was chosen, since an accident could happen everywhere. It was easy to reach the mine, - located close to a road. This mine was operating between 1904 and 1927 and it is owned by a museum now.

A lot of small incidents during the training taught the team how to act and work together. Everything was performed professionally and satisfactorily so that a delicious dinner in the hotel completed the end of the day.

The last day was spent by reviewing the exercise course and counting the equipment.