Castleguard 1994

Castleguard cave in the Rocky Mountains of Canada has been known since early in this century. The first exploration was in 1967 when two cavers only just escaped before a rapidly rising water level.

The total length of the cave is 18,6 km., with a height difference of 310 metres. S.E.Lauritzen has examined ice from the cave and concluded that the cave is about 1 mill. years old. There is a strong draught in the cave which suggests that there is another, so far undiscovered, opening.
